I was then est. John Andre was a brilliant, accomplished, chivalric and ambitious whose adjustment of glasses proved a young adjutant in the army of Sir Henry Clinton, then in possession of New York and lower Westchester. Benedict Arnold, smarting under a reprimand of congress, was in command of the strong garrison at West Point. These two men, under the nom-deplumes of "John Anderson" and "Gustavus," entered into a treasonable correspondence for the surrender of West Point to the enemy and thereby practically to close the war for independence. A meeting my life work, which otherwise I could was arranged. Seven thousand pounds and a brigadier generalship in the British army were to be the price of West Point. Arnold provided the American lines and gave him ful information as to the armament and defense of West Point and how the sham capture was to be effected. These incriminating papers were concealed in Andre's stockings. Princely bribes were offered, but spurned, but Andre was taken first to West Point, then to Washington's headquarters at Tappan, on the west side of the Hudson, near Piermont. An august tribunal, including Lafayette and Steuben, tried Andre by court-martial. He was adhalter as a spy. Every effort was made by the British officers to save

The Ninth Commandment.

It is curious that men should make so much distinction among the Ten Commandments, attaching so much importance to some of them and so little to others without their being anything in the Bible to warrant their doing so or to indicate that in the sight of God they are not equally binding. On the contrary, the Mas-ter, classing the first four together as our duty to our neighbor, declares that upon these "hang all the law," and again we are told "whose shall offend in one point is guilty of all." And yet, notwithstanding the clearness of the Scriptures upon this subject, men persist in affixing different values to them. He who would be in vain without the least compunction or desecrates the Sabbath with an easy conscience. A thief is despised while Westminister Abbey, the final by every honest man, and a murderer ambition of monarchs, statesmen, poets is comdemned by the whole commuand warriors, gathered his ashes under nity, but those who bear false witness against their neighbor are to be found in every household, and they are mistakenly think that because they are not called upon to affirm with an oath every bit of false testimony they give where our customs are faithfully perpet-uated, and where a wholesome and proutterance to they are doing no wrong. It is a pity that men and women who are wrongfully accused do not more frequently have the courage to trace calumnious reports back to the originator of them. In the days when "the code of honor" was afterward from the untutored savages and afterward from the tyranny of princes. in force people were rather more cautious about repeating every slanderous statement they heard, for fear of being called upon to prove or retract it at the point of the sword. Atlanta is a very busy city six year, and will probably bring in more; heathen idel takes the name of God days in the week. It is forging ahead in that it will cost more than $40,000,000 less than the last crop, and that instead of barely covering the cost of production there will be a comfortable profit for the planters. The lesson to the South is to raise no more cotton than there is a good market for, and, incidentally, to raise its own corn and pork instead of buying them out of the proceeds of the cotton sales, a system which tempts each planter to raise more cotton in order to meet his bill at the factor's." Again the advice of the newspapers has been proven wise, and though the larmers have for many years ridiculed "those fellows who farm in the newspapers," they are forced to admit that had they taken ten years ago the advice of newspapers and raised at home all the provision crops that were needed in-stead of buying from the West, the Southern farmer would have been more independent to day. Circumstances of dire necessity forced our farmers to do what the newspapers have long been urging them to do, and the result proves the wisdom of the editorial advice. Now, let the newspapers begin at once advise the Southern farmer against being carried away by the improved price of cotton, and induced to spoil it all by returning next year to the all cotton crop. A ten million bale crop this year would have continued five cents cotton and a ten million crop next year will return to it. Let discretion control the action of cotton planters. It is to a short action of cotton planters. It is to a short crop they are due for better prices this year; let them not kill the goose that laid the golden egg by making more cotton next year than the world needs.—

—On the 27th of last July the Bank of England reached its 200th birthday. It is the greatest bank in the world. In its early days the bank employed fifty four clerks and the yearly salary list amounted to but little over $20,000, the chief accountant receiving $1,225 a year. At the he paper is behind time. It also comes in handy in the proof reading, and is lispensable when the ink works bad and the press begins to buck. It has been known to entirely remove that tired feeling of an editor when he looks over the paper after it is printed. Outside of a printing office it is a foolish habit."

- The appraisement of the estate of the late Jay Gould foots up to the comforta-ble total of nearly $83,000,000. The real estate is valued at two million and the rest is in various kinds of personal property, principally rallway securities.
Deducting the payments already made, the residue in the hands of the executors s over $73,000,000. This may not be the his country, but it is certainly the largest fortune ever accumulated in so short a time and by purely speculative means. - Elijah Walker, of North Carolins, is one of the oldest Confederate veterans known. He is now 101 years old, and eulisted when he was 67. He fought all through the war and was severely wounded several times. wounded several times, having been shot in both hands, which latter wounds partly disabled him. Notwithstanding this fact, however, he has refused to accept the pension he was entitled to from the State on the ground that he "did not think it right as long as he was able te support himself." Now, however, he says that he is no longer able "to make a living," and he applied for the pension for the future, but for no "back arrearages." His application has been granted. Some strict Connection Sabbatarians, who are bound to have morality even i they commit a moral crime to attain it, have for several weeks been scattering tacks early Sunday mornings over the North Haven, with the design of discour-aging bleyclists from breaking the sab-bath by riding. In many cases washers have been fitted to the tacks in order to make them stand upright and render them the more certain to puncture a pneumatic tire. Every Sunday several bicyclists have had their machines disabled, as many as eight such casualties being noted in one day, and they are
